HISTORY OF THE HOUSE

Nestled at the corner of Madison Avenue and West Ninth Street in Plainfield, New Jersey, the Clark Rogers House stands as a testament to the city's rise as a commuter haven and cultural hub during the 19th century. Built in the 1860's for retired merchant, Clark Rogers, the house is listed on the National Register of Historic Places and remains one of Plainfield's finer surviving examples of Victorian Italianate and Queen Anne-style architecture.

The house has retained the many features that make this style distinctive include the decorative cross gables, cornice, and incised millwork along the frieze. The Victorian "gingerbread" trim sets off the clapboard siding, with pronounced segmental-headed windows and a three-bay leaded glass window on the main floor. The double-leaf paneled oak door is framed in an ornate segmental-arch and provides a welcoming entrance from the decorative wraparound porch. The Queen Anne style is reflected in the decorative turret and bay windows.

Today, the Clark Rogers House stands not only as an architectural treasure but also as a window into the vibrant, aspirational spirit of 19th-century Plainfield—a city shaped by trains, industry, civic pride, and timeless craftsmanship. Just steps away from the once-famous Millionaires' Row, this house continues to tell the story of Plainfield's rise and evolution.

MEET KACE A Valerie Fund Patient from Plainfield

A Lifeline of Care: Kace's Journey with The Valerie Fund

Diagnosed with sickle cell disease at birth in 2013, Kace has been receiving treatment at The Valerie Fund Children's Center. His mother, Tiffany, is deeply grateful for the continuity of care and the longstanding relationships they've built with the same dedicated team of doctors and nurses over the years.

"The Valerie Fund has been like a family to Kace and me," says Tiffany. "They've helped us understand sickle cell disease and the support systems available to us. The staff have always been welcoming and incredibly knowledgeable, with programs that help families like ours navigate a disability with limited support."

During Kace's hospital stays, Kristin, the Child Life Therapist, lifts Kace's spirits with fun and engaging activities—from cooking days and "Christmas in July" celebrations to BINGO with the Calling All Kids Network and visits from therapy dogs. "There was always something going on to take Kace's mind off why he was in the hospital," Tiffany recalls.

Tiffany also feels empowered by the medical team when it comes to making decisions about Kace's care. "They take the time to make sure you fully understand what's happening. They want you to feel confident navigating your child's health and working with the team to make the best decisions."

Shannon, the center's Hematology Nurse Navigator has been a vital resource, helping the family secure appointments with outside specialists. Kace also has access to therapeutic services to help him cope emotionally with his condition, providing a safe space to process his feelings. When health challenges keep Kace from school, The Valerie Fund's Educational Liaison, Caitlin, steps in organizing tutoring to keep him on track academically.
